

Red Light Driver

The winner of the 2007 Indy.com Music Video Competition, sponsored by WTTS and Budweiser is Red Light Driver! Now that you've seen the video, get to know them in their words:

Red Light Driver formed in the fall of 2006 in the "Circle City." Take a picture at rush-hour this time of year: red lights, drivers, and not much else. If you left the shutter open on said picture, you'd almost hear what their music sounds like--droned out Telecasters and bright white Rickenbackers; natural and manipulated drum beats, analog accents and danceable bass lines, all mingling to form a cohesive, moody coolness. Add smart, wry lyrics and fluid vocal harmonies, and you have a sound track of uncommonly moving pop songs. Red Light Driver puts the avant-garde back in pop music.

RLD's EP "Drinks for the Delayed" is available on iTunes, Rhapsody, eMusic, etc. The band is currently recording their first full-length with producer Paul Mahern and will be released in the spring of 2008.
